

Unanswered: When all is answered

Unanswered, I know it is quite an unusual kind of title for a book of poems barring a few articles. Before I say anything more about my book, I would like to say something about myself and my thought process. Born and brought up in Dehradun, I have always shared a close affinity with nature. I used to love, I still do, watching nature and ponder how it can be loving and cruel at the same time. I grew up with my thoughts and took to sailing, a job where I fit in perfectly. My roving mind now had more to ponder about. Often have I stood alone on the deck of my ship, feeling the vibrations of a surging ocean underneath and watching the sky change its colours and mood without any indication. At times I have been frightened, bewildered, mesmerized all at once. I respect nature in all its aspects: its benevolence, its fury, its colours, its stillness, its suddenness, its unpredictability, everything! Then I look at us, I mean we humans, we are the most superior, the most intelligent, the most progressive of all living creatures and yet the most miserable of all living creatures so long as we are shrouded in false ego and ignorance. Nature has its laws fixed and does not discriminate. It is we who draw what we call bad luck. I quote Cassius from Julius Caesar: "fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves, that we are underlings." All that is required is an insight into ourselves and faith in divine providence. Here lies the crux of my book, Unanswered. Unanswered is all about finding the answers which lay deeply hidden in the core of our hearts but we fail to discover it as we are covered with fog of ego and desires. Unanswered is all about revealing those answers. Non-fiction cum poetic novel are based on life as question and answers. Derived from ancient scriptures, religious books and amalgamation of various philosophies, will lead you from curse to bliss, from matter to mind, from you to him, one supreme being.

So much of questions in me which in turn coming from this mortal world led me to find answers for same and giving solace in this painful world. Why is there pain and sufferings, why do we die, what is morality, how can we become immortals are among those many questions which one will find answers to in my book in a very very simplified form. If my writing can bring peace into someones life that would solve the purpose for which book was written. From where it came, there shall it go
