Not illustrated. 1821 Excerpt: ... giving a gloss to silks. Its medical properties have not been sufficiently investigated Mr. Bisset recommends a weak solution of this salt in water, for healing apthous crusts, or the thrush in the mouth and fauces of children. A small quantity of it, powdered and mixed with sugar, is often applied for the same purpose. We are not acquainted with a more balsamic application to sore nipples, or chapped lips and hands in frosty weather, than a few grains of borax dissolved in warm water, with the addition of a little pure honey, or sugar. B09HMEV, a class of Hottentots, who, like the Maro n Negroes in the West Indies, live without laws and without any discipline: they are a sort of land-pirates who have no resources but plunder. Their name signifies bush-men, or men of the woods, and under this appellation the inhabitants of the Cape of Good Hope distinguish all those malefactors who desert from the colonies to avoid the punishment due to their crimes. The Bothmen, or Boschesmen form part of the human race so peculiar, that the following being the best account yet given of them, will be acceptable T C.J In i lit-peculiarities of this species of the human race, the Boscbesraan ha inches in length, covering the lower part of the labia: it is of a reddish colour, in substance like the skin of the dartos, it is somewhat like a large dependent penis, soft, extensible, wrinkled, devoid of hair, slit or bifid from about the mid length to its extremity, so that the two halves can be thrown over the labia pudendi on each side, when the female lies down. This organ is not a clitoris, it is not a disease, for it is universal among them, nor is it the effect of mechanical handling or extension; young girls have it of size
